VKC Research Ethics Grand Rounds

Remote Service Delivery: Ethical Considerations of Telehealth and Telemedicine

Today, physicians and consultants have access to sophisticated software and video technology that assists in mirroring the in-person delivery of clinical services. Telemedicine is a means of providing remote diagnosis and treatment through telecommunications technology. Telehealth can refer to remote clinical service delivery, but it also can describe management and education activities such as remote trainings, consultations, and continuing medical education for providers. Both telemedicine and telehealth are shifting the ways that the Vanderbilt Kennedy Center (VKC) delivers services and are opening virtual clinic doors for underserved geographic areas. Despite the advantages, there are ethical concerns inherent in remote service delivery to consider.

Join VKC TRIAD Director Pablo Juárez, M.Ed., BCBA, and TRIAD Behavioral/Educational Consultants John Staubitz, M.Ed., BCBA, and Alacia Stainbrook, Ph.D., as they guide us through a discussion of the ethical considerations of telehealth and telemedicine.

Wednesday, October 25, 2017
Light lunch 11:45 a.m. • Presentation 12-1 p.m.
Room 241 VKC/One Magnolia Circle Bldg.

Register by October 20 at:
vkc.mc.vanderbilt.edu/events/6002

Vanderbilt University Medical Center is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) to provide continuing medical education for physicians. Vanderbilt University Medical Center designates this live activity for a maximum of 1.0 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity. Vanderbilt University Medical Center is approved by the American Psychological Association to sponsor continuing education for psychologists. Vanderbilt University Medical Center maintains responsibility for this program and its content. Vanderbilt University Medical Center designates this educational activity for 1.0 CE credits toward the continuing education of psychologists. No partial credit may be awarded.

The VKC welcomes participants with disabilities. Contact kc@vanderbilt.edu for disability access information.