

Siblings of Individuals with Disabilities

TIPS AND RESOURCES FOR PARENTS

How will my children relate to one another?

Sibling relationships are often the longest-lasting relationships that your children form. Like all brothers or sisters, they may or may not develop close emotional relationships depending on individual differences and circumstances. Regardless, a child's reaction to a sibling with a disability will have a lasting effect on both siblings' self-esteem and emotional development.

How do I discuss the disability with my typically developing child?

Your child needs age-appropriate information about a brother or sister's disability. Your child will be better able to communicate feelings about having a sibling with a disability if the disability's limitations—and strengths—are understood. Open communication between you and your typically developing child will help you both express the variety of emotions you feel.

How will my child feel about a sibling with a disability?

Feelings vary between children and over times in children's lives. Children may experience a range of emotions including:

- Fear. Young children may think the disability is contagious.
- Anger or embarrassment about a sibling's appearance or behavior in public.
- Jealousy about time and attention that a sibling receives because of a disability.
- Guilt for feeling jealous or angry, or for being typically developing.
- Loyalty and protectiveness.
- Pressure to overachieve in order to "compensate" or "make up" for a sibling.
- Understanding. Many siblings of children with disabilities develop a maturity about the needs of others and appreciation of their own health.

What are the special needs of my typically developing child?

There may be gaps between a sibling's intellectual understanding of a disability and emotions. Take time to talk through these emotions. In addition, sibling support groups or similar activities can connect your child to other siblings of children with disabilities who are great resources for one another (see reverse). Your typically developing child needs your time, attention, and praise for personal accomplishments.

What are the special needs of my family?

Your family will benefit from taking part in usual family activities whenever possible. Your child with a disability should develop as much independence as possible, contributing to the family and having responsibilities within capabilities. It is important to discuss the future care-taking needs for your child with a disability. Request and value your typically developing child's opinion. Statistically, parents expect older girls to take care of siblings with disabilities more than older boys. Avoid steering an older daughter into a care-taking role and take time to appreciate her goals for herself.

RESOURCES

Who We Are and Who We Serve

The Vanderbilt Kennedy Center (VKC) works with and for people with disabilities and their family members, service providers and advocates, researchers and policy makers. It is among only a few centers nationwide to be a University Center for Excellence in Developmental Disabilities, a Eunice Kennedy Shriver Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities Research Center, and a Leadership Education in Neurodevelopmental and Related Disabilities Training Program. The following are some of the ways the Center's programs and staff can assist families, educators, and other service providers.

Sibling Programs

Support for siblings who have a brother or sister with a disability, chronic health care issue, or mental health concern. Tennessee Adult Brothers and Sisters (TABS), ages 18+. Contact (615) 936-8852.

Two Easy Ways to Take Part in Research

The Vanderbilt Kennedy Center serves families through research studies. StudyFinder is a searchable database that lists current VKC studies, including ASD research. Studies seek people of all ages with and without developmental disabilities. See kc.vanderbilt.edu/studyfinder, (615) 936-0448. Research Match is a secure place for volunteers and researchers to connect. Once you sign up and get added to the registry, a researcher will contact you if you're a possible match for the research study. See www.researchmatch.org.

Tennessee Disability Pathfinder

Tennessee Disability Pathfinder is a free statewide phone, web, and print referral service in English and Spanish. It connects the Tennessee disability community with service providers and resources. Its website database has over 3,000 agencies searchable by Tennessee county and service. Pathfinder is a project of the VKC, TN Council on Developmental Disabilities, TN Department of Health, and the TN Department of Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities. Contact www.familypathfinder.org, (615) 322-8529, toll-free (800) 640-4636..
